

Apple Growing Then and Now

Apples have a long and interesting history. Records indicate that as long as 20 centuries ago man understood the art of budding and grafting fruit trees. Apple orchards were planted in China and Egypt and all over Europe. The settlers brought with them apple seeds and planted their first apple crops in the New World. There are now hundreds of apple varieties in the United States and several thousand in the world.

©Images Unlimited Publishing

From apple books written by Lee Jackson, noted authority on apples and food. For more information visit www.imagesunlimitedpub.com

###